You can lose your license over things like jaywalking, library fines and truancy – and even minor infractions can lead to jail time.

By Tina Greig October 22, 2014 Email the author

Every once in a while, someone would come into Jud McMillin’s office in Brookville, Ind., and complain they’d been out boating on the nearby reservoir and had been ticketed for drinking beer. The Indiana state representative is a conservative Republican in a conservative state and, as such, has a particular interest in crime and punishment. He was a former prosecutor in Ohio and then went back to his hometown and into private practice.

Few people have sympathy for drunk boating – it’s a public safety issue. No, what started to grate on McMillin was the penalty: Driver’s license suspension. From his point of view, the state, like others, seemed to be all too willing to suspend driver’s licenses for offenses that didn’t having anything to do with highway safety.

Fail to pay child support? Possible driver’s license suspension. Unpaid parking tickets or court fines? Face driver’s license suspension. Marijuana possession unrelated to driving? Driver’s license suspension. A juvenile could lose a license with school expulsion or for being “recklessly” in a tavern.

In Indiana, driver’s license suspension was mandatory for some non-driving related offenses. A person who kept driving under a suspended license was looking at ever-increasing fines and mandatory minimum jail or prison sentences. According to the executive director of the state’s Public Defender Council, “200 people whose most serious offense is repeated driving without a license” are sitting in Indiana prisons.

“I’m in rural Indiana,” McMillin said. “We don’t have public transit. We have folks who want to take care of themselves, take care of their work, and because they got stuck with an offense that had nothing to do with driving, their licenses are suspended. So what do they do? They drive anyway. “I’ve seen folks who are sitting in prison for up to eight years who did nothing but keep driving on a suspended license, and the next thing you know, taxpayers are paying $58 a day because a guy wanted to get to work.”

Indiana is far from alone in this practice, which numerous studies have shown disproportionately affects low-income workers and, in urban areas, young black and Latino men. Over the past couple of decades, states have dramatically expanded the use of suspension to deter or enforce all manner of offenses. Some of this is about cash flow: fees, fines, penalties. If the person paying is guilty of some infraction, all the better.

But the policy may be more the result of the example set by the federal government, which demands that states employ driver’s license suspension for even the smallest drug-related convictions or risk losing part of their federal highway funds. Federal policy also mandates that states include suspension as a tool to force parents who owe child support to pay up.

In Arizona, failure to appear in court can result in immediate and indefinite driver’s license suspension until a fine is paid. Kiting checks in Arkansas can get your license suspended. Vandalism, prostitution and truancy can result in a suspended license in California. In New York, advocating for the overthrow of the government can cost you your license for a minimum of six months. T he examples, part of a voluminous report released last year by the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, are varied and strangely fascinating as an insight into what offenses are deemed to threaten public order enough to warrant the suspension of the one privilege that is, for millions of Americans, a necessity.

If you don’t pay for gas at gas station, truancy, jay walking, failure to curb your dog, library fines, all kind of things can result in you losing your license," said Kevin Lewis, director of driver programs for the motor vehicle administrators’ association. “It’s a document no one wants to give up so it’s an easy target to use to try and cure social ills, and has become a tool of social engineering.”

In 2002, 29 percent of suspended drivers nationally lost their licenses for “social non-conformance” reasons unrelated to driving, according to the association’s February 2013 report. By 2006, such drivers made up 39 percent of all suspended drivers. It’s old data — and extrapolated from a sample of eight “geographically and demographically representative” states — but Lewis said states just keep adding more infractions that have nothing to do with highway safety to the list.

The report, citing various studies, blasts such suspensions as ineffective, time-consuming and expensive. Most drivers with suspended licenses will continue driving, the report says. But those who pose the greatest highway-safety risk — the suspended drivers most likely to crash into you — lost their licenses for highway safety-related reasons, such as driving while intoxicated.

As for the rest, the report argues, there is scant evidence that suspending a driver’s license is an effective way to force people to, say, pay child support or stop throwing trash out the car window or to stay in school. (Child support enforcement officers across the country have just jumped to their feet in protest, prepared to rattle off the documented millions their departments have collected thanks to suspension.)

That driver’s license suspension does work as a tool to deter some and coerce compliance from others is why states keep using it — despite “tons of unintended consequences,” said Jon Carnegie, executive director of the Alan M. Voorhees Transportation Center at Rutgers University. And politically, McMillin said, license suspension is popular among those who argue that if a punishment doesn’t have teeth, people will continue to break the law.

“I can explain how it happened,” McMillin said of Indiana. “We wrote our criminal code in 1977, and since then, what happened was you had legislators who would show up with some anecdotal story where they didn’t feel justice had been served. It was a tearjerker of a story and the argument was that suspension would prevent whatever offense it was in the future and punish those doing it now, whether it was good policy or not.”

In 2013 in Wisconsin, a whopping 56 percent of driver’s license suspensions — or more than 235,000 suspensions — were the result of the failure to pay a traffic ticket on time. The law allows courts to impose up to a two-year suspension. “The reality is people who can pay the fines will pay right away,” said Nichole Yunk Todd, director of policy and research for Wisconsin Community Services Inc., which runs the state’s Center for Driver’s License Recovery and Employability in Milwaukee.

“Someone can’t pay, it doesn’t matter how long you suspend them, and we’ve seen people lose their cars and, certainly, lose their jobs.”

One eye-opening study of non-driving-related suspensions, published in 2006 by the New Jersey Motor Vehicles Affordability and Fairness Task Force, found that the vast majority of non-highway safety-related suspensions in that state were indirectly related to driving: failure to appear in court on a parking ticket or moving violation or municipal ordinance summons, failure to comply with court-ordered summons, and the bigger failure to pay a state insurance surcharge, a kind of bad-driver fee.

Low-income, younger drivers, a group that would include those who could not afford the fines or could not take time off work or find child care to appear in court, bore the brunt of the consequences: four in 10 lost a job as a result of suspension, and of those, 45 percent could not find another job because of suspension. Of those who did find other work, almost 90 percent reported they were earning less.

Besides the cost to the individual, “driver’s license policies overlook the impact of suspension on the larger community and the economy,” said Margy Waller, executive director of the Washington-based Mobility Agenda, which has studied this issue. “In order for employers to have access to a full range of employees, they need workers who can drive, who can get to work on time. And in our society today, people need access to driving not just to work, but to participate in civic life, to volunteer, to participate in school activities, to go to worship service.” The issue has been gaining traction beyond groups concerned by policies that disproportionately impact the poor.

Law enforcement, judges and lawmakers on both sides of the aisle are calling for change. A handful of states, including Florida and Wisconsin, have recently made or attempted changes to reduce non-highway-related suspensions. Most states have provisions to allow drivers to petition for a restricted license to allow people to get to work — though the circumstances under which such licenses are granted are limited. And, as of 2010, according to the federal Government Accountability Office, at least 30 states had opted out of the federal mandate requiring suspensions for drug-related convictions.

In Indiana, McMillin sponsored a bill this year that eliminates many automatic license suspensions for non-traffic offenses, creates a restricted license that relies on driver monitoring technology, and generally gives judges more discretion in license suspension. "If we are going to tell people, 'The government isn't going to take care of you and you need to take care of yourself,' then we better give them a chance to do so," he said. "We can't slam shut every door of opportunity."

The bill passed with bipartisan support and the governor's endorsement and takes effect in January.

Amendment to Existing Regulation

B. SYNOPSIS OF SUBJECT MATTER OF THE REGULATION
Pursuant to 14 Del.C. §122(a), the Secretary of Education intends to amend 14 DE Admin. Code 225 Prohibition of Discrimination. The regulation is being amended pursuant to a directive from Governor Carney to Secretary Bunting in a memo dated July 17, 2017. Through this directive, the Department was required to provide guidance through regulation to school districts and charter schools to prohibit unlawful discrimination in educational programs and activities for students. The memo also required stakeholder input and that the new regulation be published for public comment by November 1, 2017 and required a model policy that each district and charter school could adopt, or tailor and adopt, to suit the needs of the students in the district/charter school. The original proposed regulation (November 2017) received comments that resulted in substantive changes, reflected in this version of the new regulation.

Information related to this regulation can be found at the Department website here: https://www.doe.k12.de.us/page/3531.

Through this process, the Department reviewed information from various sources including the Education Commission of the States and policies from other states and prepared a preliminary draft regulation and model policy. A Development Team was then established to review the preliminary draft regulation and model policy and to make recommendations for revisions. The Development Team consisted of seventeen individuals and included superintendents, a charter school head of school, students, local board members, school administrators and an advocate. Four Development Team meetings were held. The revised draft was made available for general public input. Prior to the November 2017 publication, the Department held four Community Conversations with one in each county and one in the City of Wilmington. An online survey was made available for public input.

During the comment period that ended December 4, 2017, the Department received over 11,000 comments. The Department held a final meeting with the Development Team on January 31, 2018 and approximately 300 members of the public attended. Comments from that meeting as well as from the public comment period have been taken into consideration in the preparation of this current proposed amended regulation.

Persons wishing to present their views regarding this matter may do so in writing by the close of business on or before July 6, 2018 to Department of Education, Office of the Secretary, Attn: Regulation Review, 401 Federal Street, Suite 2, Dover, Delaware 19901 or email to DOEregulations.comment@doe.k12.de.us. BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF DELAWARE:

Section 1. Amend § 4130 of Title 14 of the Delaware Code by making deletions as shown by strike through and insertions as shown by underline as follows:

§ 4130 Expulsion of students; re-enrollment; loss of driver's license.

(a) In any case where a public school student is expelled from a school district or a charter school, the expelled student shall not be permitted to reenroll in any other school district or charter school in this State until after the full period of expulsion from the school district or charter school where the student was expelled shall have expired.

(b) Prior to enrolling any student who attempts to transfer to a school district or charter school in this State, the superintendent of that school district, or the superintendent's designee, the head of a charter school or such head's designee shall first contact the last school district or charter school where the student was last enrolled, if in this State, to determine if that student is under a current expulsion order in that district or charter school. If it is determined that the student is under a current expulsion order, that student shall not be permitted to enroll until the expulsion order has expired as set forth in subsection (a) of this section.

(c) Any student who has been expelled from a public school in this State or in any other state shall, prior to enrollment in any public school in this State, completely fulfill the terms of that expulsion.

(d) The provisions of subsections (a), (b) and (c) of this section shall not apply to any case in which a student is seeking to enroll in the James H. Grove High School or in any alternative educational or other related program developed to provide educational services to children who have discipline problems.

(e)(1) In any case where a person is expelled from a public school, the superintendent of schools for the school district in which such school is located shall send written notice of such expulsion to the Division of Motor Vehicles. Such notice shall be sufficient authority for the Division to suspend, or refuse to renew, any driver's license already issued to such person, or to refuse to issue a license to anyone reported by a superintendent to have been expelled from school. Such expelled person shall remain ineligible for the issuance of a new license, or for the renewal or reinstatement of a present or former license until the Division receives such proof as it may require that such person is again eligible for a driver's license.

(2) An expelled person whose license has been suspended may have such license reinstated, or a new license issued, if any of the following requirements are met:

a. The length of the expulsion is complete;

b. Such person is 19 years of age or older;

c. Two years have elapsed since the date of expulsion.

(3) To have a driver's license reinstated, or to obtain a new license, an expelled student must meet one of the requirements set forth in paragraph (a)(2) of this section; must apply in person to the Division of Motor Vehicles; and must provide the Division with verification from the school, or such proof as the Division may require.

The Division shall not issue any conditional license under this section unless such person's application:

a. Is made upon a form prescribed by the Division, and sworn to by the applicant;

b. Contains a statement setting forth those hardships which would occur if a conditional license were not granted; and

c. Contains a sworn statement that the applicant shall comply with all conditions placed upon such conditional license.

Section 2. Amend § 2707 of Title 21 of the Delaware Code by making deletions as shown by strike through, insertions as shown by underline and redesignate as follows:

§ 2707 License qualifications.

(b) The Department shall not issue an operator's or chauffeur's license to any:

SYNOPSIS

This Act expands the pathways to entering an alternative routes for teacher licensure and certification program ("ARTC") casting a wider net in order to attract a diverse pool of qualified candidates into the field of education as the need for teachers, particularly in critical needs areas, has increased. It also clarifies district and charter school responsibilities and ARTC program provider responsibilities, to assure proper supports are in place. Under this Act, attainment of final licensure and certification is contingent on meeting all ARTC program requirements, demonstrating effective teaching based on a state-approved evaluation system, and attaining passing scores on applicable and available approved content readiness exams and a performance assessment. These exit requirements hold ARTC participants to the same high standards for final licensure and certification as those entering the field from a typical teacher pre-service program.

This Act also makes technical corrections to confirm existing law to the standards of the Delaware Legislative Drafting Manual.
